"As soon as one sees that there is no "God" to condemn or punish him and that he can only get that which belongs to him, and will surely get everything that does belong to him in a Universe of Law, then he has no reason for being "cheerless," but feels satisfied, responsible, and confident. ... Furthermore, we always have the power of choice – if only in the attitude we take toward the circumstances of life."

Robert Crosbie, The Friendly Philosopher, p. 197-198
